Viva adopts Lido mPilot from Lufthansa Systems to enhance cockpit operations

- Viva selects the iOS-based EFB solution Lido mPilot to digitize navigation and airport charting
- Fast-tracked implementation within just two weeks
- Lufthansa Systems expands its footprint in the Latin American aviation market

Raunheim, 2nd June 2026. Lufthansa Systems announced that Viva has chosen Lido mPilot, its electronic flight bag (EFB) solution for iOS, to enhance safety, streamline cockpit operations, and accelerate digital transformation across its growing network.

How Lido mPilot supports pilots in daily operations

Lido mPilot gives pilots intuitive access to dynamically updated aeronautical charts, geo-referenced airport maps (including Airport Moving Maps), weather overlays, enroute navigation data, and operational documents, all within a mobile-first design. These features were key factors in Viva's decision, helping reduce workload and enhance situational awareness in all phases of flight.

"Our pilots rely on accurate and up-to-date information to operate with the highest standards of safety and efficiency. With Lido mPilot, we are taking an important step in optimizing our operations by implementing a robust solution that enhances the cockpit experience and supports better situational awareness and decision-making," says David Valladares, Director of Control Center and Operations at Viva.

The implementation was done at record pace within just two weeks. This underscores Viva's commitment to agile, technology-driven improvements that boost reliability and performance and the ability of Lufthansa Systems to support time-critical deployments.

About Viva

Viva is Mexico's ultra-low-cost airline. It started operations in 2006 and, as of April 2026, it operates one of the youngest fleets in Latin America with 108 Airbus aircraft: 61 A320s and 47 A321s. With a clear mission to make air travel accessible to all, Viva has democratized the airline industry, offering the lowest fares in Mexico and the lowest operating costs in Latin America. Viva offers their passengers the best domestic and international destinations while also recognizing their loyalty through Doters, their rewards program with over 11 million users.
